

The Lathrop Library is home of the East Asia Library and other units previously housed in Meyer Library. The four-story building is filled with seminar rooms and classrooms equipped with state-of-the-art technology designed to enhance teaching, learning and research. Audio Visual Design Group was contracted to provide the audio visual systems in this expansive space. Our systems included several conference rooms, 24-hour study space, sound masking and classroom spaces.

In the largest state-of-the-art classroom in the library, faculty members can adjust the acoustics of the 3,000-square-foot room to suit the situation – while making a presentation at a whiteboard, using one of its 80-inch interactive displays, conducting a Q&A or directing the students to work in small groups.

Key Information:

Project Completed: October 2014

Project Value: $1.33M

Project Team:

Architect: Perkins+Will

Builder: DEVCON

Furniture: RMA

